

of pain. "We discovered that the Russians set up a very sophisticated underwater listening equipment at Geley Point. They have a copy of Dubboff's tape, and they're taking it out to a Russian sub by raft at dusk. They're using the abandoned lighthouse there . . ."

His voice trails off.

You glance out the window. The sun is almost setting. You have very little time. You have to get that tape.

*If you head out to Geley Point alone,
turn to page 26.*

If you call the naval radio station in Tientsin for help, turn to page 40.