

You and Mrs. Bower sit down in her office.

"Tell me what happened," you say.

"An aide brought me several letters at about 9:30," Mrs. Bower replies. "I screened them quickly to see which ones were important enough for the president. I knew he would want to read the letter from DuMont, so I put it under the others along with a couple of others that looked important. I left for a meeting at 9:30. When I came back at 10:00 the other two letters were there, but DuMont's was missing."

---

*If you haven't talked to Timbers and
decide to question him,
turn to page 53.*

*If you have talked to Timbers and decide to question McFlin further,
turn to page 47.*

*If you decide to give up trying to find out who took the letter,
turn to page 44.*