

You tell McKim you'll have to think it over and let your conscience be your guide. You shake hands and bid him good day. A few hours later, when you get a phone call from Orlaud, you still haven't made up your mind. To your surprise, Orlaud already knows about your conversation with McKim.

"You're fired," he tells you. "We have a saying in the Special Intelligence Group: if you have to let your conscience be your guide, you'll never make it as a spy."

The End
